An illustration of the apparatus used by [Kitchin] and [Hutchinson] to measure the area of a single square. The method described is explained by [Hitchin] in the Transactions of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, 1881, p. 117. The question of knowing the area of a given plane surface when it is impossible to mark out the boundary of the surface has often been discussed and is still an unsolved problem. [Kitchin] and [Hutchinson] consider this problem and suggest a simple method of measuring a single square inch, a problem which has been of importance in our everyday life. They propose to cut the square out of an ordinary A4-size paper and paste it over an ordinary wall or ceiling. In this way they believe that one can draw the sides of the square with a black pencil. This must, however, be done very slowly in order that the pencil should not leave any traces on the paper. The square must be drawn in a very accurate manner and must be done in the following way. [HITCHIN] and [Hutchinson] measured the area of a square of side 1 inch. The four corners of the square were cut away with a pair of 82157476af
